REGENTS SEND TENURE PETITION TO HAYNES FOR "STUDY"

The Board of Regents turned the tenure petition of 647 University students over to President Rowland Haynes Wednesday for "study and for recommendations if necessary."

The Board's committee on faculty and student relations reported on the petition, stating that: an informal system of tenure is already in effect at the University, as evidenced by the number of professors who have recently purchased or built homes; the petition and the method of presentation was a real disservice to the whole faculty; and the practice of the Board has been to determine general policies but to act after recommendations from the University president.
